As the capital of a rich and historic region, Ancona is above all, a city of the sea. The city is blessed with a magnificent coastline to the south, with clean and accessible water and unspoilt white beaches. Close by are the beautiful towns of Loreto, Recanati, Jesi and Urbino as well as the rolling hills of the hinterland and the world-famous Grotte di Frasassi.

THE CITY

Enrico Matteucci (image cropped)

A harbour city, capital of the prosperous Marche region, Ancona has a rich history. Its name comes from the Syracuse word for elbow - Ankon - and the city has been a trading centre for at least 3,000 years, linking both coasts of the Adriatic Sea. This activity has left traces on the city's monuments, its buildings and its urban fabric. The city is surrounded by a beautiful landscape, with hills rolling into the sea. Ancona's mountain - Mount Conero - descends steeply into the water, and is now a regional park which protects its natural habitat.

Ancona is also a capital of theatre - and historic theatres can be found across the region and offers all kinds of shows. Finally, the region boasts a delicious cuisine and some of the best wine in Italy such as the Cornero red, Verdicchio and the Lacrima di Morro d'Alba.

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

luca.sartoni (image cropped)

As in most Italian cities, even in Ancona the aperitivo has taken over, especially during weekends. But, unlike other cities, it starts quite early - around 18.30 - and it doesn't last long. After an aperitivo people go to restaurants or pizzerias for dinner.

Ancona's locals say that the city offers a tame nightlife. Usually, they chill-out and chat in bars and restaurants of the city centre until 22.00. Then, they go to the famous discos in Riccione or Rimini (about an hour's drive away or accessible by train) or to the coastal towns nearby such as Falconara and Senigallia.
