LucVi/Shutterstock.com

Valladolid oozes history from every ancient stone. King Felipe II was born here, the Catholic Monarchs Ferdinand and Isabel married here and Christopher Columbus died here. This was once the capital of Spain, but although it has lost this title, it is still now the principal city of Castilla y Leon, the land of castles from which the word 'Castilian' derives. Today, Valladolid is a bustling university city that thrives on its manufacturing industries. It is a down-to-earth, lively place that energetically blends old with new.

THE CITY

Jose Ignacio Soto/Shutterstock.com

Valladolid may be known for its history and its ancient monuments, but overall it is resolutely a modern city. The seamless blend of present and past give the city its rich character. You can find everything from a Museum of Modern Art that resides in the cloisters of an ancient monastery, high-class restaurants, contemporary cuisine in sixteenth-century constructions, and students dancing to high-tech beats in nightclubs on the historic streets.

When the activity gets too much, this is also a great place for relaxing. The city is located on the banks of the Pisuerga River, and it has capitalized on its waterfront location by creating an urban riverside beach. For all lovers of green grass, the popular Campo Grande is the place to go for a Sunday-afternoon stroll.

Then, of course, there is the culture. Valladolid is home to top museums, superb theatre and opera, and beautifully restored architecture of bygone times. If you love language, know that the Spanish spoken in Valladolid is said to be the purest in the whole country.

DO & SEE

Anton_Ivanov/Shutterstock.com

Valladolid offers a wide range of activities like theatres, historical sites and many top museums. You may go look for beautiful and popular sites such as Plaza Mayor and Plaza de San Pablo or the Museo Nacional de Escultura and Museo del Arte Contemporaneo Español. There is so much to see and so much to learn in this city that has had such a huge impact on the history of Spain and the American continent! One more tip, if you have not yet learned about the decisive Valladolid Controversy, this is a good thing to read about before or during your stay.

Plaza Mayor

Plaza Mayor is the main square of Valladolid and an unmissable sight. Flanked by vibrant red buildings, this glorious old square is located in the very heart of the city. In the summer, many outdoor activities take place making it the perfect spot for a coffee break with a nice view, notably on the Town Hall.

DINING

Martin Turzak/Shutterstock.com

Valladolid is famous for its suckling lamb, as well as all the other Castilian specialities such as suckling pig, game and rabbit, which are often served in rich, juicy stews. But anyone needing a break from this hearty fare will find plenty of other options here in Valladolid. The city has experienced a boom in tapas bars in recent years, and there are plenty of international eateries serving everything from pizzas to pancakes. The streets around the Plaza Mayor are teeming with good restaurants and tapas bars.

Crepería Eh Voilà

This creperie is a good place to go for a more casual bite, or if you've had enough of rabbit stews and suckling lambs.

It serves both savoury and sweet crepes, as well as lasagnas, salads, quiches and so on. The settings are modern and arty, but the dining room a bit small so you might want to book.

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

nd3000/Shutterstock.com

Valladolid is a university town, resulting to a great local bar scene. Be warned though, Valladolid is a Spanish city and nightlife kicks off late. Eat dinner at ten, and then move on to a bar or three before checking into a nightclub at two or three in the morning. Don't worry too much about your beauty sleep - that's why Spain and its inhabitants invented the siesta. At night, the air is cooler and the young Spaniards emerge to party through until dawn. Valladolid has an energetic night scene: you may not be home in time for breakfast.

Café Cervecería

This is not only a cafe where you can enjoy coffee, breakfast, lunch and tapas but also an Irish-style pub where you can enjoy a nice fresh pint of beer, chosen from a selection of over 100 different beers -including, of course, Guinness. It also has a beer garden.

SHOPPING

Kamil Macniak/Shutterstock.com

Shopping in Valladolid might not be to the scale of bigger cities like Madrid, but it remains a pleasant experience, with many options, enough food shopping available to keep the sugar level high, cute shops - all of which in mostly pedestrian streets.

The main shopping street of Valladolid is Calle de Santiago, which runs between Plaza Mayor and Plaza de Zorrilla. To the East of Calle de Santiago lies Calle Mantería which is a pedestrianized walkway featuring shoes, clothes, cakes and many other delightful things. The big brands tend to cluster on Paseo de Zorrilla, on the western flank of Campo Grande, and you can for example find the famous El Corte Inglés in this zone.

Pasaje Gutiérrez

The Pasaje is a 19th-century shopping arcade built commissioned by Eusebio Gutierrez. The luxurious shopping arcade was built in a period of economic growth and prosperity in order to satisfy the needs of the new city's wealthy elite. The style of the building is a great example of the beaux-arts architecture, popular in the 19-century. A great place to shop all the while traveling back in time!
