THE CITY

Life is at its most tranquil out in the archipelago, while the town centre has a cosy atmosphere that makes shopping a real pleasure, with a combination of familiar chain stores and local shops. Karlshamn also has many cultural gems and well-preserved buildings that reflect the town's colourful past. If you enjoy fishing we have some of the best salmon fishing stretches in the world here, or you could go on a wildlife safari, explore and experiment with science, walk or cycle along the river Mörrum or enjoy the party atmosphere at one of the largest and liveliest town festivals in Sweden. It's hard not to have fun here.

Karlshamn, which was originally called Bodekull, was given its town privileges back in 1664 by the then king, Charles X Gustav, and was named after him two years later. It had an ideal location on the Baltic Sea, the harbour was one of the deepest in Sweden, and Frisholmen (the Citadel), the fortified island at the mouth of the harbour, provided good protection from the Danes, who wanted to retake their land. At its peak, about 400 soldiers were garrisoned on the Citadel. They lived under harsh conditions and fought hard in the skirmishes with Denmark. The town was already home to many German and Dutch merchants, who were skilled seamen and traders. This was one of the main reasons why Karlshamn became such a prosperous trading town.

Despite several fires and outbreaks of plague in the 18th century the town continued to thrive. There were more than 40 tobacco works here, and snuff from the region was sold all over Europe. In the 19th century, the arrival of the railway gave a real boost to shipping and trade, as even more German merchants settled here. Thanks to its snuff and tobacco production, two factories making punsch and the first and largest playing card printing works in Sweden, the town became known as a den of iniquity. To crown it all off, the "King of Spirits" - Lars Olsson Smith - whose face decorates one of Sweden's biggest export products, began his career as a distiller here.

The harbour quarter was a lively place where emigrants bound for America rubbed shoulders with merchants and smugglers, and there was a pub on every corner.

Karlshamn still has one of the largest ports in Sweden and life beats strong in the old heart of the town, the square. The pubs and the verandas where punsch was once drunk have made way for friendly restaurants and cosy terrace cafés where people meet and socialise. To get the best picture of what life was like in the town in times gone by you should visit the cultural quarter. There are beautiful timber houses and cobbled streets all over the town and many people know Karlshamn as the "City with the beautiful backyards".

Eriksberg wildlife sanctuary

Eriksberg consists of more than 1340 hectares, of which 409 hectares of water. The fenced portion is about 900 hectares, which means that Eriksberg is one of northern Europe's largest wildlife reserves. There are red deer, fallow deer, wild boar, bison and mouflon.

You can explore this beautiful park on your own in your car or have somebody guide you through the park. Eriksberg is a park where most of the animals walk around freely.

Exhibition about salmons

People come from near and far to enjoy the angling, but also to experience the area with the Kungsforsen falls in central Mörrum, the restaurant and the Aquarium next to the exhibition. Here you can meet the mighty salmon without wading into the rapid waters and you can experience the history that has made the Mörrum river a Shangri-La for fishing enthusiasts around the world.

Salmon fishing in Mörrum has a very long tradition, with royal connections since time immemorial. It was first described in 1231 in Waldemar II's land register.

Fishing spears were used long ago for catching salmon on the river. These were gradually replaced by salmon tubs, hoop nets, salmon seines and salmon nets, which were in use as late as the mid 1960's.

Today, however, all commercial salmon fishing has ceased, but the old permanent fishing areas at Kungsforsen and Hönebygget, can still be seen.

On certain days during the summer and autumn, the hoop net is used in the time-honoured way, but now for the purpose of fishing for salmon breeding. The only other salmon and sea trout fishing allowed is angling.

Tjärö - the island paradise

Right at the seafront in the middle of Blekinge's archipelago is a protected and sheltered little island: Tjärö. The unique character of the village in the archipelago is more than well preserved; the entire island is a preserved park with high rocks, lush green oaks and cliffs that in the evening sun invites you to a dip in the clear water. Tjärö is a very beautiful island with a wonderful nature. Here is a nice STF-hostel with a good restaurant - Anders Hafvskrog, which serves delicacies straight from the sea (White Guide). There are possibilities to rent boats and canoes. A lovely marina welcomes guests by boat. You go by boat to Tjärö from Järnavik and it takes 15 minutes. During summer there is also a boat leaving from the harbour of Karlshamn.

Carlshamns Culture Quarter

The museum is located in the cultural centre of Karlshamn - Kulturkvarteret. Here you will find the old Swedish punch factory, tobacco factory, an art gallery and the famous song writer for children Alice Tegnér's room. Skottberg'ska Gården is also in the cultural quarters, next to the art gallery. It is one of Sweden's best preserved trading houses with roots from the late 18th century, original adornments and an apartment furnished in the style of that period.

C G Berg's factory was taken over by "the King of liquor" - L O Smith. He produced Carlshamn's Flagg Punsch, which nowadays is produced by the state-controlled company for the sale of wine and spirits and can be bought in the State liquor shop.

J N von Bergen was a great businessman in Karlshamn. In addition to the liquor factory he ran a number of businesses. During a period of 20 years in the mid 19th century he was the largest producer of playing-cards in Sweden. J N von Bergen's liquor factory had an extensive production of Punsch, liqueur, and aquavit. The factory is rebuilt in the museum in an almost authentic setting, with equipment, machinery, bottles, wooden barrels, movables, trade books, awards, and other things from the factory. Everything is preserved!

Copies of old punch glasses and playing-cards are sold by the museum.

Old Buildings

Old buildings in the Cultural Quarters are "Skottsbergsgården" - Manor House and Merchant's Structure - and "Holländarhuset" - Dutchman's House. Skottsbergsgården was built in 1766 and is considered to be among the best preserved merchant's structures from older times in Sweden. Holländarhuset is the oldest building in the town, probably built for Dutch merchants during the 17th century.

Silversmith's Workshop

At the museum a Silversmith's Workshop is reconstructed in - almost - its every detail.

Printing Works

The local newspaper was printed by one and the same printing works from 1848 until the printing works was closed down in 1976. The composing room, office and bookbindery are preserved at the museum along with the Munktell printing press from 1830, which was used for the first issues of the local newspaper.

Dahlens Snuff

Karlshamn had several tobacco factories that produced cigarettes, cigars and snuff. One of those, Dahl's tobacco factory, was established as early as 1798 and is represented at the museum with a collection of labels and posters.

L O Smith

L O Smith - "the King of Liquor" - started and ended his financial career in Karlshamn. The museum plans an exhibition on this remarkable man and wishes to get in touch with anyone who has something to tell about him.
