Aygul Sarvarova/Shutterstock.com

Marmaris lies in a bay with crystal-clear water. Just for emphasis: Marmaris lies in a bay with crystal-clear water. This is where the Mediterranean meets the Aegean Sea. Fragrant pine woods stretch out along the mountain crests. Marmaris is the perfect destination for wonderful days on the beach with lots to see and do, and plenty of sun to be basked in.

THE CITY

Aygul Sarvarova/Shutterstock.com

Marmaris has grown from a tiny fishing village into one of the biggest tourist resorts in Turkey. Even so, the town centre is still quite small, and in the old quarter behind the marina, you can stroll around amid all the delightful hustle and bustle of bazaars and street life.

For a beautiful view of the Bay of Marmaris, visit Suleiman the Magnificent's castle in the Old Town. Marmaris' neighbouring resort, İçmeler, lies just a few miles away. Many people like to walk along the beach, which will also give you an idea of how much is happening in the boat scene, and the wide range of water sports available along the beaches.

While Marmaris offers more buzz and entertainment, İçmeler boasts better beaches. It is also child-friendly, and newly built. Turkey's rich and famous tend to congregate in the marina at Marmaris, which means there are good restaurants and great shopping. During the high season, there are as many as ten thousand boats in the Bay of Marmaris, reckoned to be one of the finest bays in the world. There are several excellent long-distance footpaths in the mountains, and many opportunities for excursions amid the beautiful scenery and the little villages along the coast.

DO & SEE

Evdokimov Maxim/Shutterstock.com

Marmaris is a popular Turkish Holiday resort with plenty to do if you like the beach, history and culture. Enjoy an authentic Turkish Hamam or visit one of the nearby towns or islands. Your holiday here will be full of sun and excitement.

Marmaris Fort And Archaeology Museum

The little fort dating from 1522 has been restored and is worth a visit though the most remarkable aspect is still the view of Marmaris.

The museum has various fragments from antiquity and several Medieval cannons.

Address: The Harbour, Marmaris

Datça Peninsula

The road across the Datça peninsula has stunning scenery, with steep mountains, ravines and flat countryside.

Datça is an attractive village about 90 kilometres west of Marmaris. From Körmen, just north of Datça, there are boats to Bodrum. At the Saturday market in Datça you will find food, household utensils, beautiful tablecloths and clothes. Take the local bus.

Dalyan / Kaunos

Travelling eastward from Marmaris takes you along the deservedly famous Lycian coast. At the Dalyan River, about 80 kilometres east of Marmaris, are the spectacular rock tombs at Kaunos, and untamed scenery. The Loggerhead turtle comes here to lay its eggs on the beaches. The river's mud is used for packing people in clay, and is regarded as very health-giving. You can come here on excursion bus or dolmus.

Address: Kaunos

Fethiye

This is a quiet little town, ideal for families, surrounded by fields of fruit and tomatoes. Almynta's tomb, the town's symbol, is here, and nearby there are several Lycian graves. In the market there are small fish counters where you can select the fish you want to eat. One of Turkey's most spectacular beaches, Ölüdeniz (the Dead Sea, meaning the Calm Sea), lies about 25 minutes by bus from Fethiye's centre. Come here on a local bus or dolmus.

Address: Fethiye

Patara & Demre

The long and beautiful Patara beach, with its protected sand dunes, is where the sea turtles come to lay their eggs. The ancient town, hidden beneath the sands, is now being excavated. Patara is best known as the birthplace of St Nicholas, who we call Santa Claus, Father Christmas. You can visit his grave at Demre. Come here on the local bus or dolmus.

Rhodes

The Greek island of Rhodes is a very popular destination for excursions. At the moment the town is undergoing an extensive facelift; churches, monasteries, mosques and mediaeval buildings are being restored to their former glory. Both UNESCO and the European Union are protecting its unique cultural heritage, as the Old Town, with its winding cobbled streets, is one of Europe's most authentic mediaeval sites. There are daily boat trips here and the journey takes 1 hour.

Turkish Bath – Hamam

If you have never taken by Turkish bath, you have never been really clean. It is a real adventure to experience this in a traditional environment.

There are separate baths for ladies and gentlemen, but tourists are often allowed to take a mixed bath together.

Pamukkale

This really is one of nature's wonders. There are terraces with pools, and the water runs down from one level to the next in a natural spectacle created by white lime deposits. The name means "The Cotton-wool Fortress." Unfortunately, too many visitors have created a lot of wear and tear on the cliffs, and now most of the pools are closed to the public. There are daily excursions here, but you can also take the local bus. The travelling time is about 3.5 hours.

BEACH LIFE

Kalin Eftimov/Shutterstock.com

You can go swimming right in the middle of Marmaris, and the beach stretches all the way to neighbouring town İçmeler. There are boats and dolmus to the beaches at Turunç, Çiftlik and Kumlubükü, and many yachts and sailing boats go there as well. Marmaris has several international diving schools. It is also possible to get to the beautiful little island of Sedir Adalari. The sand there is unique, and legend has it that it was brought here by Queen Cleopatra 2,000 years ago. Whether true or not, it is still a beautiful place!

DINING

Elnur/Shutterstock.com

Turkish cuisine is regarded as one of the finest in the world, up there with French and Chinese cuisine. The Turks eat a great deal of meat, though not pork, and not all restaurants serve alcohol. Marmaris has restaurants to suit all tastes and wallets.

Pineapple

Pineapple is a prestige restaurant frequented by oil sheiks and celebrities who have moored their yachts in the marina. The food is top-class, and so are the prices.

CAFES

Repina Valeriya/Shutterstock.com

Sometimes it is hard to tell a café and a bar apart. Places that serve tea and coffee during the daytime transform themselves in the evening and become part of the nightlife. What is really nice is to sit somewhere on the beach promenade, admiring the traditional gulet boats and other sailing boats, while sipping some apple tea or a drink.

Aquarium Kitchen Cafe

Aquarium Kitchen Cafe existed in Marmaris even before the tourists came. You can find this café just below the fort and it offers a large open-air service.

Address: Barbados Cad. Yat Liman, Marmaris
Phone: +90 90 252 413 1522

So Sweet Café & Bar

The So Sweet Café & Bar serves, as the name suggests, what could be the most incredible desert and coffee experience in Marmaris. The restaurant is located at the Marmaris harbor and offers a great view of the sea front.

Address: Uzunyali 207, Marmaris
Phone: +90 2524 130 020

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

Kalin Eftimov/Shutterstock.com

The moon shines bright across the pitch black starry sky, the waves of the ocean softly accompanying the wind in a peaceful rhythm. A lonely seagull lets out his cries across the skies, looking for a lost piece of food. As you walk the streets, observing people moving past you like vessels looking for a connection of love, friendship or plain happiness, you realize that this was the place where you can truly leave your stress behind. Visit one of the many bars and clubs where people come to connect, to share their experiences, their emotions, and their dreams. A place where language is not mandatory to truly connect, this is about souls connecting on a deeper level.

Forget about the busy, crowded, stressed out metropolis where you came from and enjoy this new culture, the new experiences, the people. Step into the nightlife of Marmaris as the city shows you a beautiful other side that only happens when the moon comes out to show itself. This is your time to start exploring, both the city, and your heart. Sit on the beach, watching the waves slowly pushing up to the beach as you dig your feet into the warm sand, the moon reflecting on the sea, casting a porcelain reflection onto the dark blue. This is where you belong, free and relaxed, close your eyes and enjoy your time away from it all.

Bar Street 2

The area near McDonalds at the other end of the Harbour is more like a funfair, with one attraction after another. Here you can find quite a few drag queen bars and places like Green House, Casablanca and B52.

SHOPPING

Klemen Mistic/Shutterstock.com

First, a brief warning: As Marmaris is such a big tourist destination, you have to keep an eye on prices. Some things can cost four times as much as they do elsewhere, for example, in Datça. Be alert for fake versions of branded goods, and check that you can actually change the batteries in the watch. Otherwise, it will just be an expensive throwaway watch. However, pirates do not necessarily mean worse quality than the originals.

Haggling is essential, above all when buying carpets. When all that is said and done, it can still be a lot of fun just to wander around the bazaar that stretches over several blocks in the town centre. You will find carpets, leather jackets, pirated designer goods and souvenirs are all kinds. At the market (Thursdays in Marmaris and Fridays in İçmeler) you can buy honey and spices (always worth buying in Turkey). Tablecloths are another good buy. But just browsing around all the stalls without shopping is also quite an experience. These days, the market in Marmaris is a covered market (near the dolmus station and the Tansas department store).

Pasha Gold

Gold, silver, and diamonds, that's what you can expect when you enter Pasha Gold. The store itself has beautiful displays of their wares and is an oasis of tranquility opposed to the busy streets. Take a look for yourself!

Grand Bazaar

An immense bazaar selling all kinds of items, food, and gifts. Immerse yourself in the crowd and amongst locals as you browse the various stalls.

If you're not a fan of crowd it is advised to go very early or close to closing time.

Marmaris Market

Another grand marketplace within Marmaris comparable to the bazaar. Expect to find a lot of unique things, mostly handcrafted, at cheap prices. Just be sure you know how to barter and you might walk away with a good profit.

Public transport

The simplest, most popular and cheapest way to get about is to take a so called dolmus. You can also take a minibus or a large taxi. They depart when they are full and stop where you want. The dolmus often depart outside supermarkets and from central Marmaris. From the Otogar bus station, buses set off for other places in Turkey. It is a good idea to book a seat in advance. Many bus companies run services along the same routes. You can also take a taxi boat if you want to go to one of the nearby villages like Icmeler.
