Newport, Oregon is a beachcomber's paradise. The bustling port town is one of Central Coast's prides, serving home or a proximity to 6 beaches! Newport's unique fishing and maritime identity flows with Yaquina Bay (featuring the largest commercial fishing fleet in the state of Oregon), the Marine Science Center, Undersea Gardens, and the Oregon Coast Aquarium. It doesn't end there, though: Newport also flaunts a downtown "Deco" district replete with art deco buildings, art galleries, creative shops, and cute restaurants.

THE CITY

Jess Kraft/Shutterstock.com

Newport has been a popular Pacific Coast resort town for over a century. Its first resort area, Nye Beach, dates back to 1866, the year the city was founded. Today it is still home to lodging, shops and resorts.

Nye Beach, like all of Newport's districts, has something that makes it special.

For instance, although Bayfront is also home to several shops and restaurants, it is also a working fishing port. Fishermen launching from the port at Yaquina Bay bring in all kinds of catches year-round, including Dungeness crab, Albacore tuna, shrimp, halibut, and Pacific whiting fish. It is often referred to as the "Dungeness Crab Capital of the World."

The downtown or "deco" district is known for its art deco buildings, and, while South Beach is also a popular fishing area, it is best known as the location of the Oregon Coast Aquarium, which is consistently named in the top ten aquariums in the country.

Newport typically experiences mild, wet weather, with highs barely exceeding 65°F in the summer. This combined with its other popular attractions create a welcoming atmosphere that envelopes this west coast town.

DO & SEE

steve estvanik/Shutterstock.com

So much to do in this coastal town, much of it outdoors and on the water. In addition to camping, hiking, fishing, biking, surfing, and different types of boating, there are museums, music venues, and antiques to browse. See below.
