Palm trees provide a periphery of greens and browns as shadows run along the otherwise snow-capped contours of the mountain ranges. It is clear to visitors why Hollywood stars made Palm Springs their instant escape during the 1920s. The resort town has long remained a getaway for the upwardly mobile—garnering the nickname of “Hollywood's Hideaway”—and has since blossomed into an accessible vacation destination for those seeking lavish leisure among a host of natural and man-made attractions.

THE CITY

Patrick Nouhailer / Flickr (image cropped)

Palm Springs is named for the abundant California palm tree and the hot mineral springs around which the city's original inhabitants, the Agua Caliente Band of Cahuilla Indians, built their village thousands of years ago. European settlers did not establish themselves in the area until the late 1800s. And in the 1920s, Hollywood stars began to create a retreat from Tinseltown in the desert town.

It continues to be a favorite vacation spot for celebrities, but it has grown into a major resort town, popular with tourists from all walks of life. In addition to vacationers, Palm Springs is also home to a resident population of about 45,000. This is due to a rise in construction in the middle of the 20th century, as well as Coachella Valley's popularity as a retirement destination.

DO & SEE

StacieStauffSmith Photos / Shutterstock.com

With tourism at the heart of Palm Springs' economy, you know there will be plenty to do during your visit. Moderate winter temperatures draw over one million visitors to Palm Springs each year and make it a popular destination for outdoor activities like hiking, horseback riding and sitting by the pool. Golf is also popular, with over 100 golf courses in the area.

Palm Springs Air Museum

A significant stop for aviation lovers, the Palm Springs Air Museum houses the largest collection of flyable World War II planes, as well as a theater, flight simulator, and a children's activity center. CNN Travel named it "One of the 14 best Air Museum's in the world."
