Before rising to global and national significance with the arrival of the 2002 Olympic Winter Games, Park City, Utah was a relatively unknown gem of the west. Residents adored the area for its abundance of recreational opportunities, from hiking and biking, to skiing and snowboarding. This opportunity was capitalized upon during the 2002 Olympic Winter Games—which was consequently deemed the most successful in Winter Olympics history. The spotlight has remained on Park City, with Forbes Traveler Magazine naming it among the “20 prettiest Towns in the United States,” and the International Mountain Bicycling Association’s bestowing of the Gold-level Ride Center designation for the city’s mountain bike trails, services, and community spirit.

THE CITY

Ken Lund (image cropped)

Park City, Utah came under the swath of eager settlers during the Gold Rush of the 1800s. Rather than gold, however, whispers of silver in the mountains brought forth both American prospectors and international adventurers in the 1860s. This influence is still seen in the European-style resorts and architecture present in Park City. Gross economic gain from the height of mining rose upwards of $400 million in silver—and bore 23 millionaires (including the creator of newspaper, William Randolph Hearst).

Park City's mining success fell with the Depression of the 1930s, when falling mineral prices would spell certain doom for the city's boom years. The decline opened up an opportunity for success in Park City's other natural resources: the snow! Quickly becoming "The Greatest Snow on Earth," Park City now contributes a yearly average of $529,800,000 to Utah's economy with its tourism. The Canyons Resort, Deer Valley Resort and Park City Mountain Resort ski resorts draw tangible success, reeling in excited sports enthusiasts and families year round.

Along with being an impressive ski town, Park City is the home of the Sundance Film Festival, the United States Ski Team, the training center of the Australian Freestyle Ski Team, the 2002

Olympic bobsled, skeleton and luge track at the Utah Olympic Park and an array of grand golf courses. Visitors can also expect to find northern Utah's largest collection of factory outlet stores. Several companies make their headquarters in Park City, making it one of the wealthiest cities in the United States.

Park City's rich past and exciting future have led to a handsome number of its buildings being listed on the National Register of Historic Places, as well as an adventuresome 1,200 miles of tunnels remaining in the mountains from the mining era.

DO & SEE

wickenden (image cropped)

Park City is far more than ski slopes and picturesque snow! Enjoy a combination of recreational, relaxing, educational and historical sites, and activities. See Park City from the air with hot air balloon rides, or opt to delve into the city's spooky past with the ghost tours.

Utah Olympic Park

The Utah Olympic Park featured the 2002 Olympic Winter Games as a prime competition venue: the Park held Nordic jumping, bobsleigh, luge, and skeleton. Now there are

DINING

Symic (image cropped)

Dining in Park City is never short of exciting and amazing. Many of the resorts feature fine dining atop hills accessed only by way of ski lift. Main Street dazzles with a collection of cuisines.

J & G Grill

J & G Grill's rather unassuming title is unbecoming of the restaurant itself, which is a masterpiece among Contemporary American dining venues. The menu of light but flavorful dishes seems to mirror the ambiance: an exhibition kitchen, double-sided wood-burning fireplaces, walls glistening in quartz, walnut ceruse ceilings, and supernal vistas of the slopes place an exclamation point on the experience. Open for breakfast, lunch, and dinner daily, J & G Grill is at the behest of its customers and under the culinary genius of Jean-Georges Vongerichten. The appetizers, gourmet pizzas, quality meats, local produce, fresh fish, and side dishes are sure to woo the palate. To accompany your meal, choose from the largest wine collection in Utah, with more than 1,100 labels and over 10,000 bottles.

Address: 2300 Deer Valley Drive East, Park City, UT
