Adelaide is a new city in an old land, founded as a British colony in 1836 and now being the capital of South Australia. Today, its rich mix of diverse cultures exists together in a relaxed and cosmopolitan lifestyle, having both many green parks as well as 30km of beaches stretching along its suburbs. The city is famous for its al fresco eating culture and it is the centre of the Australian wine industry, with some of the best food and drinks in the world.

THE CITY

Leshaines123/Flickr.com (image cropped)

When Governor John Hindmarsh arrived and founded a British colony back in 1836, the Adelaide Plains had been home to the Kaurna Aboriginal people for many thousands of years. The settlement that arose on the plains has developed into one of the most culturally diverse cities in the world.

The centre, which lies closer to the Torrens River than to the coast, is a grid of wide graceful streets encircled by a ring of parks. This arrangement gives Adelaide an open and green atmosphere, which, coupled with the blue skies of the warm South Australian climate, make for a beautiful city.

The colonists came ashore at Port Adelaide, whose 19th-century centre is still intact and it gives the visitor a feel for the colony's early days. Adelaide soon spread out to the seashore, and now has a long line of relaxing beach suburbs that can easily be accessed by trams that run from the city centre.

The arrival of successive waves of immigrants – from Germans and Italians to Lebanese and Japanese – have given the city an enviable reputation for good food and drinks, with some of the most diverse eating opportunities within the whole world. The wine making brought by German immigrants has turned Adelaide into one of the world's great wine producing centres.

DO & SEE

ymgerman/Shutterstock.com

Adelaide is easy to get around and it offers a wide variety of attractions for all ages. Here you can learn more about world-class wines, admire the beautiful Adelaide Oval and watch a sporting event. And why not learn more about the history of the country at South Australian Museum or at the Migration Museum. If you are longing for the beaches, take the tram to Glenelg which is a popular seaside suburb. All you need to do is to enjoy your holiday while exploring this amazing city!

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

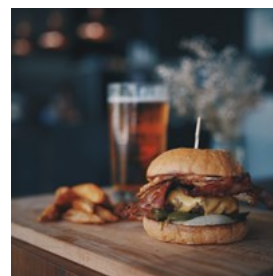

Neale Cousland/Shutterstock.com

Bars and pubs can be found all over Adelaide, as drinking beer and wine is something of an Aussie national pastime. Many of these establishments are housed in fine historic buildings and also offer good local food.

Nightlife in Adelaide is confined to certain streets, whereas some parts of the centre become quite deserted in the evening. The centres of the action are Hindley Street with its brasher and neon-lit strip, and Rundle Street with its more bohemian pubs and bars. The beach suburb of Glenelg also has a lively and youthful scene during both day and night.

The Austral

This fine pub in the heart of Rundle Street is something of an Adelaide institution, and it has an excellent menu of modern Australian food. Thus,

The Austral is also a great place to enjoy local and international ales, and live entertainment as well.

SHOPPING

Rawpixel.com/Shutterstock.com

There are two main keys to the Adelaide shopping experience, and the first is around Rundle Mall and down to Grenfell Street where you will find a mix of high-end and local shops. The second key is to the southwest of the central grid of streets, between Grote and Gouger Streets, where you will find the Adelaide Central Market, known as the food pantry of Adelaide. Here, you will discover a dazzling array of foods, showing the wonderful abundance of raw ingredients that Australia produces. This area is also a showcase of the melting pot of cultures that make up Adelaide today, with the sights and smells of Italian, Vietnamese, Lebanese, Greek, Chinese and Japanese cuisines to feast upon, to name only a few.

Adelaide Central Markets

The Adelaide Central Market buzzes with life and colour all year round and it is a special place for regulars, who wouldn't shop anywhere else. Here you'll find a huge range of fresh food, all under one roof: fruit and vegetables, meat and poultry, seafood, gourmet cheeses, bakery products, sweets, nuts and health foods. Shoppers can also take a break in some of the hippest cafes in Adelaide.

Passport / Visa

Unless you are a New Zealand citizen granted visa exemption on arrival (in most cases), you will need to obtain a visa prior to visiting Australia.

Citizens of all European Union countries, as well as Andorra, Norway, Iceland, San Marino, Switzerland, Liechtenstein, Monaco, and Vatican City are eligible for an eVisitor visa, which can be applied for online. For citizens of the United States, Canada, Japan, Hong Kong, Singapore, Brunei, South Korea and Malaysia, the Electronic Travel Authority (ETA) entry permit is available, which can be applied for online and grants holders the right to enter Australia an unlimited amount of times for stays of no longer than 3 months per visit.

Citizens of all other world countries (with the exception of Somalia) are also able to apply for a visitor visa online. For more information, visit the official website of the Australian government's department of home affairs: <https://www.homeaffairs.gov.au/lega/lega/form/immi-faqs/what-visa-do-i-need-to-visit-australia>

Best Time to Visit

The most lively seasons in which also locals are out in order to enjoy the warm weather is between February and May, as the average temperatures of around 24 degrees allow for every outdoor (and must-do) activity and also attending interesting events such as the Adelaide Fringe Festival. While February is the hottest month of the year, the following ones cool down the weather to a level of comfort that ends with winter coming around from June until August.
