THE ISLANDS

Roderick Eime/flickr (image cropped)

Fiji's 332 islands are scattered over a vast area of the Pacific Ocean, some are 1,290,000 sq km in extent. Viti Levu, which is the main island of Fiji, is about 10,400 sq km in area, with high rainfall in the east and much lower rainfall in the west. The country's first and third biggest cities respectively - Suva and Nadi - are located at opposite ends of Viti Levu, like sentinels guarding against enemy invasion - only these days, the invaders are friendly, coming as tourists rather than cannibal-warriors.

Because of the consistently bad weather conditions, Fiji's main international airport was moved to Nadi in 1982. As a result, most of Fiji's tourist development and facilities are concentrated around Nadi and the southern "Coral Coast" of Viti Levu. Nadi also makes a great base for exploring the Mamanuca and Yasawa island groups, the southern island of Kadavu, and the "garden island" of Taveuni, with easy access also to the laid-back port of Savusavu on Vanua Levu Island.

DENARAU ISLAND

gpointstudio/Shutterstock.com

Fiji is really a shoppers' delight, a place where you can get anything from brand name items to the most personal and exceptional native handcrafts. There are various villages and marketplaces to stroll around. Perhaps the best place to start the shopping adventure is in the main cities. Nadi for example is one of the most favorite shopping cities in Fiji since there are plenty of fantastic bargains and the items are duty free too. Suva and Lautoka are also great shopping towns.

If you like to shop cloths, check out the incredible fabrics and the lovely silks. Why not buy something that will remind you of your time in Fiji? A Sulu, for example, is a traditional Fijian sarong or dress.

Jack's of Fiji

If you are looking for authentic Fijian jewelry, souvenirs, clothing, watches, handicrafts, cosmetics or gifts, Jack's of Fiji is the place to go where you can find everything including international brands and authentic arts and crafts made by local communities.

Public Transport

Rental Cars Europcar is the preferred car rental partner of Virgin Blue & Pacific Blue. Select your car from a wide range of vehicle types and reserve online or call +61 1300 13 67 37 for a special rate. If you need a car at last minute, just present your boarding pass to the Europcar counter at the airport for a fantastic deal, subject to availability.

Buses

Getting around Fiji is cheap and easy due to the good network of buses, carriers (small trucks) and ferries. Local buses also allow the visitor a chance to mingle with the people of Fiji, who by choice and tradition, treat strangers with gracious hospitality. Every town and village has its own bus stop since the bus is the most common form of transportation. You can also hail any public bus from the roadside just by waving to the driver.

Travelling to and from Nadi

Only the West Bus (small yellow bus) is allowed into Denarau. Running every fifteen minutes, the drop-off is right in the middle of the Port Denarau shops. You pay $1.00 to the driver when disembarking, not on entry.
