Photo: Nouhailler

firnt

Bonifacio is on the extreme south of Corsica, only a few kilometres from Italy. This beautiful city is full of secrets and of history. You will be surprised by the extreme bright colours. The shining sea and the "maquis", as well as the fierce white limestone, give an impression of wildness. Nature is luxurious and you will see thousands of fish swimming around you.

The warmth of the climate is also the warmth of the inhabitants. As thousands of visitors every year, you will definitively want to come back!

THE CITY

flrnt (image cropped)

Fierce and proud, Bonifacio is perched on a granite cliff and overhangs the sea.

Welcoming inhabitants since the prehistoric era, the city has become strategic due to its geographical position, on a strait. It was developed by Tuscans to be a citadel and was named after Boniface II of Tuscany in 828. The citadel was held to fight against the Moors of Spain, who were pirates. Fight scene of the Pisan and Genoese armies, Bonifacio was disputed between these two powerful states. It briefly became an Aragonian property but was definitively acquired by Genoa after a series of treasons and sieges. In 1767, the Republic of Genoa sold Corsica to France and asked for special treatments to some cities, including Bonifacio.

Bonifacio has gained international recognition through its protected marine parks, its luxurious nature and its beauty. The folklore and traditions are still very living and maintained.

DO & SEE

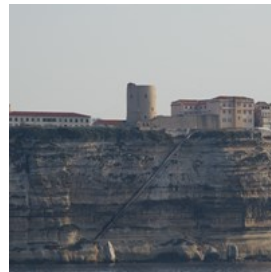

Nouhailier (image cropped)

An absolute open-air museum, the city is pure amazement. The impressive nature and the rich history gathers to make the city a pure gem. You can stroll around the city all day and night long, you will always find something new.

You will also find your favourite beach among the 40 kilometres of sandy places in Bonifacio!

L'Escalier du roi d'Aragon

These King of Aragon's steps are for the ones who are not faint hearted! The vertiginous view over the sea and the city is breathtaking.

Legend says that these steps on the cliff were created in one night only to allow the king of Aragon to escape from the siege of the city.

Be careful, the steps are very steep and you will need courage to climb them!
