Located at the foot of the Massif Central and less than a two-hour drive from the Mediterranean, Rodez is the capital of the Aveyron Region. This picturesque region is one of the best kept secrets in France for foreigners, offering more attractions than you would expect. Rodez is surrounded by several village-communities that contribute in making the town a tourist destination and that have great cultural and historical assets. While in Rodez you can enjoy city pleasures without leaving the countryside and vice versa. Just take your time since there is a lot to see in and around Rodez.

THE CITY

Don-vip (image cropped)

Rodez was the historical capital of Rouergue, a former province of France, now the Department of Aveyron. It has been an Episcopal city since the 4th century, proud of its beautiful 80-metre tall cathedral with its impressive bell-tower.

This charming town is easy to go through on foot: a sequentially marked itinerary will take you back through the city's two thousand years of history. Furthermore, between town and countryside, Greater Rodez is home to a renowned historical heritage with beautiful sites to visit.

DO & SEE

mimohe / Shutterstock.com

Old Rodez features several historic townhouses and mansions from the 14th-17th centuries, and beautiful religious buildings like the chapel of the old Jesuit College. You will love wandering on Rodez's footpaths and alleys, where you'll also find some truly excellent restaurants with their regional specialities, small cafés with enchanting terraces and beautiful open-air markets.

Sainte-Radegonde

This small town, not even 10 km from Rodez, hides two amazing fortified churches that, with their walls and ramparts, look more like majestic castles. Also, they have sheltered rooms that visitors can see, but only after having climbed 70 steps.
